

PRESS RELEASE – 4 December 2019

Amsterdam's typography on the map

Amsterdam Typography has launched the website www.amsterdamtypography.nl documenting typography in Amsterdam. Its interactive map contains over 300 points with photographs of letters and numbers found throughout the city and this collection is expanded daily. Together these images give an impression of Amsterdam through the lens of typography.

The project Amsterdam Typography started as a Twitter feed in January 2019. Particularly fascinated by the style of house numbers and name signs from the Interwar period, Arno Verweij decided to document the city's interesting letters and numerals and share them with the world. To keep track of all these photos, he has put them on a map, which has resulted in the project's website launched in December 2019.
